BRITISH ARCHIVES AND DEPOSITORIES.

The Illinois Historical Survey's collection of copies of manuscripts in the British Archives has been selected with reference to the study of American colonial history, particularly the history of the trans-Allegheny West and the Mississippi Valley. In addition, this material also represents the research interests of faculty and graduate students at the University of Illinois as the Survey has served as a depository for some of the documents they have used. The earliest copies of documents were acquired in 1906, and were made by copyists, but the bulk of the collection acquired since 1933, is reproduced in the form of photocopies or microfilm. For some aspects of the history of the Survey's acquisitions of British transcripts, see Henry Putney Beers, The French and the British in the Old Northwest (Detroit, 1964).

Guides and Other Finding Aids

This description of the Survey's transcripts is based primarily on its two card files for manuscripts, one arranged in archival order, the other in chronological sequence. However, in order to determine the nature of the Survey's holdings in relation to the depository housing the original documents, and also as a guide to the collections of these various depositories, a number of invaluable published finding aids can be consulted. For the Public Record Office, chief depository of the archives of the British government, there are two descriptive guides published by the Carnegie Institution of Washington: Charles M. Andrews, Guide to the Materials for American History to 1783 in the Public Record Office of Great Britain (Washington, 1912, 2 vols.); also Charles O. Paullin and Frederic L. Paxson, Guide to the Materials in London Archives for the History of the United States since 1783 (Washington, 1914). References to the publications of the Public Record Office and the catalogs of its collections may be found in these volumes.

An invaluable work for the study of the British in the mid-eighteenth century is L. H. Gipson, A Guide to Manuscripts Relating to the History of the British Empire, 1748-1776: Vol. XV of The British Empire before the American Revolution (New York, 1970). Also three specific aids for the Public Record Office are very useful: The British Public Record Office: History, Description, Record Groups, Finding Aids, and Materials for American History with Special Reference to Virginia (Richmond, 1960) is an introductory guide to the use of the Public Record Office, as is Guide to the Public Records, Part I: Introductory (London, 1949); and lastly, the basic descriptive work of the Public Record Office is Guide to the Contents of the Public Record Office (2 vols. London, 1963) which supplements and partially supplants M. S. Giuseppi's earlier volumes.

For materials in the British Museum and certain other collections there is another Carnegie Institution publication: Charles M. Andrews and Frances G. Davenport, Guide to the Manuscript Materials for the History of the United States to 1783, in the British Museum, in Minor London Archives, and in the Libraries of Oxford and Cambridge (Washington, 1908). This publication is supplemented by B. R. Crick and Miriam Alman: A Guide to Manuscripts Relating to America in Great Britain and Ireland (London, 1961). The Guide to the Materials in London Archives for the History of the United States since 1783 by Charles O. Paullin and Frederick L. Paxson, while denoting a different time period, does list some materials in the British Museum prior to 1783. Also, the British Museum has published a continuous series of printed catalogs of their additional manuscripts.

Both the Library of Congress and the Canadian Archives began the acquisition of reproductions of foreign archival materials at an early date; therefore, the guides describing their holdings are indispensable. The history of the Library of Congress acquisitions is given in the introduction to Grace Gardner Griffin's A Guide to the Manuscripts Relating to American History in British Depositories, Reproduced for the Division of Manuscripts of the Library of Congress (Library of Congress, 1946). Descriptive matter and bibliographical references make it useful even beyond its listing of the Library's holdings.

BRITISH ARCHIVES AND DEPOSITORIES.

The transcripts in the Canadian Archives are described and calendared in a long series of publications beginning in 1884. David W. Parker's A Guide to the Documents of the Manuscript Room at the Public Archives of Canada, Vol. I (Publications of the Canadian Archives, No. 10, Ottawa, 1914) describes the transcripts made in England and France, and makes references to the published calendars of the various series of documents. See also David W. Parker's Guide to the Materials for United States History in Canadian Archives (Washington, 1913). Between 1951 and 1967, the Public Archives of Canada published a series of Preliminary Inventories of Manuscript and Record Groups, which describe various collections of manuscripts including those obtained from British and French sources as well as those of Canadian or French Colonial origin. Though still useful, these pamphlets are now being replaced by the General Inventory, Manuscripts. For manuscript collections throughout Canada an invaluable volume is the Union List of Manuscripts in Canadian Repositories (Ottawa, 1968).

Notes

In addition to reproductions of documents, the Illinois Historical Survey also has calendar notes taken on documents by Professor T. C. Pease. Many of these contain extensive quotes, but as they are not full reproductions, they are not listed under the respective document classification. They are found mainly in the following categories: PRO, CO; PRO, SP 78 and SP 94; PRO, WO; Shaftesbury Papers; and the British Museum's Newcastle Papers and Hardwicke Papers.

Organization

The Survey's copies of materials from British sources are arranged by depository in the following manner: national archives, national library and other depositories. The numbering system utilized below closely follows that used by the respective depository. The underlined numbers appearing in the left hand column, unless otherwise indicated, refer to a volume number. The next number, in parenthesis, indicates the items of that volume held by the Survey; these items may take the form of photocopies, office machine copies, typed or handwritten copies, or microfilm. Other indications as to the form of the material are self-explanatory. The dates generally refer to either the inclusive dates of the Survey's holdings or to the dates used by the respective depository. Following this information is a brief description of the material; it is not meant to be all inclusive. To determine the exact items in the Survey's collection of materials from British Archives, it is necessary to consult the archival card file.

Manuscripts

PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE. PAPERS, 1547-1790. 5014 items, 7 boxed or bound volumes. 38 reels of microfilm and 1 calendar. Photocopies, transcripts, microfilm. Archival card file. 61-2206.

Established in 1838, the Public Record Office serves as the main official depository for British governmental archives. Its materials are classified by the department from which they came, or in the case of gifts, under a heading or classification to which they would most appropriately belong. Finding aids to this very important depository have been listed in the introduction above. Those guides also contain references to aids which might prove useful in finding needed information from the collections.

AUDIT OFFICE

This body in the 1963 guide to the Public Record Office is classified under the rubric "Exchequer and Audit Department." These papers are accounts by governors, agents, and others for maintaining the army, building and maintaining forts, and conducting Indian affairs. "Declared accounts" are those which have been settled. For a description of the Audit Office Papers see Andrews' Guide..., II, 67-106; the revised 1963 Guide..., II, 117-122, and also L. H. Gipson's Guide..., 97-103.

COLONIAL OFFICE

This classification contains the papers and records of the Board of Trade and those of the office of Secretary of State. The best guides for this division of the Public Record Office, and a discussion of the changes in its organization of documents, is Andrews' Guide..., I, 78-267; also see the 1963 Guide..., II, 52-92. Care must be used in the use of the Colonial Office papers as the Public Record Office has reorganized this material at least three times. The following group of papers is organized, as was the previous Survey guide to this collection, on the basis of the order in the Andrews guide and the guide by Grace Griffin. See Griffin's Guide..., 11-43, also Gipson's Guide..., 19-55. The researcher might also wish to consult the Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series, America and West Indies..., Vols. 1-44, 1574-1738.

Colonial Office 5 is one of the most important collections of documents for the study of American Colonial History, and it includes a wide variety of material such as Entry Books, Acts, Journals, instructions, and dispatches. Some topics emphasized in the Survey's collection from this group include Indian trade, the French and Indian War, Pontiac's Rebellion, Colonial South Carolina, and land companies in the West.

The British Museum, established in 1759, is second only to the Public Record Office as a significant British depository for manuscripts relative to American History. Papers acquired at an early date are arranged by collection; but, with the acquisition of the "Sloane Manuscripts," the library began numbering its acquisitions consecutively as "Additional Manuscripts." Often large blocks of papers essentially forming groups will be found; these are designated by number as well as Collection name, for example, Bouquet Papers or Newcastle Papers. For a description of the collection in the Survey Library, attention is called to the Guides listed in the introduction to this section.

EGERTON MANUSCRIPTS

This is a particularly large collection which contains various other collections within it. Most of the American material is described in the Andrews and Davenport's Guide... (Vol. 2395 is described in detail), 28-50; however, it should be noted that other papers have been added to it over the years and therefore it is necessary to consult later additions in the British Museum guides and catalogs. See also the Griffin Guide..., 97-99, the Gipson Guide..., 171-173, and the Crick and Alman Guide..., 178-180.

BROMWELL, HENRY PELHAM HOLMES (1823-1903). PAPERS, 1862-1866. 11 items, originals, photocopies. Calendar. 69-1586.

Henry Pelham Holmes Bromwell was a member of Congress, 1865-1869, when he lived in Charleston, Illinois; later he moved to Colorado and continued in public life. Among the original items is a letter written by Major James A. Connolly, "before Savannah," describing the march through Georgia and expounding on the anti-black actions of Union General J. C. Davis. There is also a deposition by Allan Pinkerton regarding Timothy Webster, one of his secret service operators, who was captured in Richmond, given a court martial April 2, 1862, and executed. The photocopies include three letters to Bromwell from W. H. Herndon, who asks assistance in his Lincoln research, and a letter from Bromwell describing arrangements in Springfield for the Lincoln funeral. [The Survey's collection of original papers was presented by Miss Henrietta Bromwell of Denver, daughter of Henry Pelham Holmes Bromwell. The photocopies are from the Bromwell letters in the Library of Congress.]
